The “hands-on” workshop is structured to obtain input from the public on creating practical solutions to the major transportation issues identified in the study area. The study committee will use the input to develop preferred alternatives. The goal of the study is to improve overall transportation mobility for residents, businesses and visitors and enhance economic opportunities along transportation corridors while maintaining safety and minimizing impacts to neighborhoods and communities.

The Study is a partnership between the Central Massachusetts Metropolitan Planning Organization (CMMPO) and the Central Massachusetts Regional Planning Commission (CMRPC). It is a comprehensive assessment of the multimodal movement of people and goods within Worcester and the surrounding communities that form the urban core of Central Massachusetts.

The study area includes Worcester and portions of the surrounding towns that lie within the urban core (Holden, Paxton, Leicester, Auburn, Oxford, Millbury, Grafton, Shrewsbury, Boylston, and West Boylston). This area encompasses the major roadway and public transportation systems in, through, and around the central urban area.
